What is a Primary Election?

A Primary Election is an election held preceding the General Election for the purpose of nominating a party nominee to be voted for in the General Election to fill a national, state, county, or district office. Party nominees from the Primary Election go on to face opposition from minor party candidates, candidates with no party affiliation, and/or qualified write-in candidates in the General Election.

Florida is a CLOSED Primary Election state What does this mean?

Only voters who are registered members of a political party may vote for that party's candidates in a primary election, unless the race is a Universal Primary Contest, meaning all candidates are running with the same party affiliation and there is no opposition in the General Election. (However, there are no Universal Primary Contests in this election.) Nonpartisan contests, such as judges and school board, are voted on by all voters in a Primary Election. (However, there are no nonpartisan contests in this election.)
